Join us on April 19th for two valuable presentations:

1 – Interesting Introductions for Any Occasion

Every time you meet someone, the conversation starts with the same question: “so what do you do?” In this presentation, learn new tricks to stay memorable, build rapport and get the conversation going on the right foot. There are more options than the stale “elevator speech!”

Who is a better authority on job searching than the grumpy HR person who never passed your resume on to the hiring manager? For eight years as a recruiter, Donna Shannon did exactly that – designing hiring processes meant to illuminate the majority of candidates in the simplest way possible. It was her job to make the fast judgments that impacted hundreds of candidates – usually negatively – without a second thought.

Donna teaches classes throughout the Denver metro area, and has presented at conferences in Dallas, San Francisco, Tampa and San Diego. She was recently a featured guest on Channel 9 News and KOA-AM radio as well as MileHiRadio and is the author of ‘How to Get a Job Without Going Crazy (2nd Edition), A Practical Guide to Your Employment Search’.

2 – The Millennial Are Here – Ready or Not

No generation has created so many challenges for management as the millennial. They are defined as workers born after 1980. They are the workforce of the future and are very talented and offer unlimited potential to the manager that learns to fully channel and utilize their talents. In order to maximize their full potential, we have to understand their values and aspirations. This knowledge leads to the realization that we need to modify our current management style. You don’t have to learn these millennial management lessons on your own or by trial and error.
